The Smart Cities Mission in India is an initiative undertaken by the Indian Government. The Ministry of Urban Development is assigned the job of coordinating with concerned states regarding the development challenge. Development starts at the bottom. Therefore urban areas must be growing in the right direction. Predictions say that urban development in India would contribute 75% to the country's GDP. Due to the increasing population, institutions like housing, schools, colleges, and recreational facilities are required for overall development. Hence, through the Smart Cities Mission, the Government of India aims to retrofit and introduce advancement for the betterment of the country.
